

Still the Clever Country?

Innovation

through the application of science, engineering, technology and mathematics (STEM) will be fundamental to improving workforce productivity, growing our economy and to improving our standard of living.

Professional Scientists Australia advocates for the investment and structural reforms necessary to create a sustainable science workforce.